SHOUT OUT

Joe Martin, author and entrepreneur

Joe Martin grew up in Schiller Park, and graduated from East Leyden High School. An entrepreneur and founder of Martin Creative, his book, "6-Week Cycles" examines an approach to achieving work-life balance. The book is scheduled to launch at the end of June on Amazon.

Q: What has been the impact of six-week cycles on your own team?

A: Increased productivity, stronger communication and a better company culture. So much of it stems from planning. It's amazing how much people can get done when they know what they need to do.

Q: At Martin Creative, you combine data and design. If you could combine any two things in the world, what would they be?

A: Business and empathy. Combine business in a manner that isn't solely focused on profits but more about what's best for people and the environment. This isn't a new concept nor am I the only one pushing for it, but I think these kind of ideas need all the help they can get to help create some change in the world.

Q: On your website, you describe the influence that forming a band in high school had on your business career. What other East Leyden experiences impact you today?

JEN SCHILDGEN, BLUE VERVE STUDIO

Joe Martin, author of "6-Week Cycles"

A: Meeting new people and making new friends. My right-hand man today was one of my best friends during my time at East Leyden, and still is today. While we fell out of contact for a few years, we were able to join back up and make some incredible things happen. I think that's what great friendships do. They wax and wane. It's not always about being in someone's life 100 percent of the time to be a great friend, but to be there when it matters most.

Q: You'll be presenting at TedX Wrigleyville this August. What is your favorite TedX talk?

A: Sir Ken Robinson's 2006 talk titled, "Do Schools Kill Creativity?" I think it's a lesson about each of us finding our place in life — that people don't always fit into nice little packages and it's up to us to help ourselves, and others, find their passions in life.

Q: What experiences and people help you recharge or refresh your life?

A: It usually comes back to music for me. While I don't have the band anymore, I started playing out again a couple of years ago. I try to play at least once per week. There's a really great open-mic in Wicker Park on Wednesday nights where I can be found; amazing group of musicians who come out to hang out, support each other, fill in where needed. It's that—that scene, that group of people—that refreshes me.

Q: When you come to Franklin Park, what do you enjoy?

A: I spent my high school years living across the street from North Park and really appreciate going back. It's where I used to hang out with friends and play hockey or have water balloon fights. I've attended weddings, birthdays, and even my 10-year high school reunion in their ballroom.

If you believe your only options are agonizing knee pain or surgery...You are WRONG!
Thousands of Chicagoland Boomers and Seniors are now getting knee pain RELIEF, INSTEAD of knee replacement.

Chicagoans, you can now eliminate your knee pain with a hot new pain cure.

Imagine... go shopping, walking or jogging, gardening, going to church, playing with your grandchildren, or going golfing without knee pain...

Do all of the things you used to enjoy and... get your life back free of knee pain.

Not only is it possible, thousands of Chicagoland Boomers and Seniors with knee pain have experienced the amazing relief this new non-surgical treatment option provides.

It's like taking 30 years of wear and tear off your knees - in less than 30 minutes!

"I didn't know how much LIFE and SLEEP I was missing because of my knee pain, until it went away with this wonderful treatment." - George R.

So What Is Causing My Knee Pain And How Do I Stop It?

It's pretty simple, really. You see, when you're young, you have a thick, fluid protein inside your knee joints to lubricate them as you move.

This fluid also acts as a cushion and shock absorber inside your knee. It's called synovial fluid, and it works much like the oil in a car's engine to keep all the parts moving freely, without friction.

However, as you age, this fluid dries out, leaving your bones to painfully rub and grind against each other with every step. And unfortunately, there's no way for the knee to make more.

After years of working perfectly, your knee starts to feel a subtle ache with certain activities like using stairs, kneeling down, or getting out of the car. With time, it becomes a constant ache. If left untreated, it can keep you awake at night, and hurt with every step.

But Should You Consider Surgery?

Maybe you're thinking about knee replacement surgery. It's a popular option that has been around for a while now. But, do you really want to lay in bed for weeks with the possibility of still being in pain after? We've seen many patients still hurting for years after knee replacement surgery. It's not a 100% guarantee that you'll be pain-free.

The good news is, researchers have discovered all natural, lubricating fluid called Hyaluronic acid that is nearly identical to the fluid we have in our knees. It has been proven in numerous clinical studies to act as a natural lubricant in your joints.

It's FDA approved and is a perfect cushion and shock absorber for your joints. In fact, it's even been compared to letting your sore joints rest on the softest down pillow. It's almost as if your knee sighs with relief and relaxation.

Sounds Nice But My Knees Aren't That Bad...

Sure, you can put up with this ache in your knee, but the cost of doing nothing about it is HUGE.

"Every day was hard. I couldn't enjoy my favorite activities anymore. But thankfully, now I'm back in full form. I am doing yard work for the first time in years!" - Phil M.

Seriously, you can get the knee pain relief you are looking for without wasting your precious time recovering or even spending a dime!

But, there is a HUGE problem:

This treatment will ONLY work if it is administered precisely into the troubled tissues in the knees. If this treatment is delivered slightly off those areas it will never help you.

This is why a lot of people have received treatments like orthovisc or Synvisc in the past and never had any pain relief. A lot of them went on to have surgery they never needed in the first place.

In fact, a recent study looked at trained doctors who administer those kinds of injections blindly found that a third of them miss those specific areas in the joints. So, those patients walked away not knowing that whatever treatment they received will never have a chance to work because it completely missed the trouble areas.

This is why the doctors at Joint Relief Institute use advanced imaging in addition to an unique

If you received this kind of treatment in the past, and it didn't relieve your pain, there is a BIG chance the medication landed somewhere around, but not INSIDE, the joint where it can't help you. This happens 30% of the time without digital imaging.

JRI Doctors see live into the knee joint. Even you will be able to see the medicine flowing where it needs to be. No guess work, no poking around, the medicine cushions, lubricates, and helps heal the damaged knee.

double confirmation technique to guarantee that every single injection administered ends up in the right place. Taking the precision further to a double confirmation technique is exactly why patients previously failing with 3 different doctors without advance imaging are now having pain relief for the first time in more than forty years. No wonder many patients are driving all the way from Michigan to receive this treatment.

Is it true this natural treatment costs NOTHING?

Yes, more good news, besides the pain relief, is that because this non-surgical program has already proven to help thousands of seniors, Medicare and other insurance plans will cover the full cost of the treatment. So there is very likely NO COST to you for this life-changing treatment.

Here is what you need to do

If you or a loved one is suffering with knee pain, this could be the blessed relief you're looking for.

You are personally invited to a FREE knee pain screening from the Joint Relief Institute doctors to see if you are a good candidate for this all natural, highly-precise treatment.

Your screening will only take about 20-30 minutes of your time, as one of their doctors sits down with you and answers all the questions you have about your knees.

On the day of your treatment, you'll be able to come in on your own, and be done within 30 minutes or less. No pain. No problem driving yourself home.

Due to high demand, they can only offer a limited number of FREE screenings every month.

Local Iwo Jima vet adds signature to flag

BY DANIEL I. DORFMAN

In February 1945, Lincolnwood resident Maurice Lipshutz was a young Marine preparing to storm the Japanese island of Iwo Jima.

More than three quarters of a century later, Lipshutz, 93, who now lives in a retirement community in Lincolnwood, recently added his name to a flag that has garnered hundreds of signatures from veterans across the country who took part in the Battle of Iwo Jima — one of the seminal moments in U.S. military history.

Lipshutz was one of approximately 70,000 U.S. Marines who fought in the battle, storming the island to try and gain control of Iwo Jima and airfields from the Imperial Army of Japan. The island, where Associated Press photographer Joe Rosenthal snapped his iconic photograph at Mount Suribachi of Marines raising the American flag, was officially declared secured by the U.S. on March 26, 1945, roughly a month after the U.S. landed on Feb. 19, 1945.

Roughly 7,000 Marines were killed in the battle and approximately 20,000 more were wounded. Lipshutz himself said he doesn't like to recount what he experienced during the Battle of Iwo Jima.

"I try to forget," he said. "The first thing I saw was a Marine who was decapitated."

After the Allies won the war, Lipshutz returned to the area, living in Chicago and Lincolnwood and eventually going into the hardware business with his father-in-law. He still owns a store today.

Even though he doesn't prefer to share much about his efforts during the Battle of Iwo Jima, Lipshutz did agree to add his signature to an effort being done by John Beele, a former Marine himself who has been working to collect as many signatures as he can from veterans who fought in Iwo Jima.

Beele said the foundation for the idea started nearly 30 years ago, when, as a commandant of a Marine Corps League in the southern suburbs of Chicago, five members of his detachment were veterans of Iwo Jima.

After a reunion of a unit of Iwo Jima veterans several years later, one of the five south suburban Marine veterans gave Beele the flag as a thank you for organizing activities at the reunion, he recalled. At a subsequent reunion, the same veteran encouraged many of his fellow Marines to sign it for posterity.

The signatures have continued to come since then. The flag now has approximately 280 signatures from veterans of World War II, according to Beele.

With the generation dying out, Beele said, he wants to make sure he captures as many signatures as possible from both Marines who served in Iwo Jima and members of the Navy who bombed the island ahead of the invasion. It will eventually be sent to the National Museum of the Marine Corps near Quantico, Virginia, where the two flags that flew over Iwo Jima now hang, Beele said.

The effort also led him to Lipshutz, who signed the flag June 11 after Beele traveled to visit him.

The ceremony originally was scheduled for May 31 but was postponed at the last moment after Lipshutz encountered health problems.

When Beele returned in June, Lipshutz, wore a hat showing he was an Iwo Jima survivor, exchanged "Semper Fis" and quickly apologized for not being able to attend the original event in May.

"I'm the kind of guy who, if I did something wrong, I want to apologize," Lipshutz said.

DANIEL I. DORFMAN/PIONEER PRESS PHOTOS

Maurice Lipshutz holds up a tube of sand that is believed to be from Iwo Jima during a signing ceremony in Lincolnwood.

John Beele shows Maurice Lipshutz, of Lincolnwood, the flag that Beele has used to collect hundreds of signatures from veterans who served in the Battle of Iwo Jima. Lipshutz, who fought in the battle, added his signature June 11.

When Beele brought the flag to Lipshutz, he asked him where he wanted to sign, recalling in an amusing tone how one person did not want to sign the flag in a spot next to a fellow veteran whom he didn't care for.

Lipshutz responded: "When you are on the island, you like everybody."

During the ceremony, Beele also showed off a tube of sand that, he said, was from Iwo Jima and then concluded the event by leading the audience in a rendition of the "Marines' Hymn."

Throughout it all, Lipshutz emphasized that he does not seek publicity or acclaim for his service. But he did acknowledge that it was an honor for him to be able to sign the flag.

"Because I'm glad there are still people alive who understood what it meant for freedom," he said.

Beele said Lipshutz also is like many World War II veterans he has met over the years.

"Every Marine that I have met who has signed this flag, who was on Iwo Jima does not feel they were the heroes," Beele said. "The heroes are still on the island — the guys who didn't get off."

NICHOLAS BLASE 1928-2019

Former Niles mayor remembered for shaping the town he led

By STEVE SCHERING

Nicholas Blase's nearly 50-year career as Niles mayor might have come to an ignominious end with his fraud conviction and resulting prison term, but after his death June 17 at the age of 91, those who worked with him in village government described him as an affable, effective leader in the northwest suburban town.

Blase grew up on Chicago's South Side, close to the old Comiskey Park, but in the late 1950s, he moved with his wife and newborn baby from Rogers Park to Niles.

Blase, a lawyer, was soon recruited to run for mayor, and in his first campaign in 1961, he defeated 20-year-incumbent Frank Stankowicz. He held that office for 47 years before stepping down after being charged for his role in a kickback scheme in which Blase steered local businesses to a friend's insurance company. He resigned before pleading guilty to mail and tax fraud.

Current Niles Mayor Andrew Przybylo was appointed to the village board as a trustee by Blase in 1989, and was first brought into village government by Blase as a member of the village's zoning board of appeals in 1987.

Przybylo spoke of the growth Niles saw during Blase's tenure, efforts he said included the upgrading or erecting of public buildings including a village hall, the police station, a public works building and a senior center.

"He was a true leader," Przybylo said. "The board may have disagreed with some things, but they gave him the benefit of the doubt with his experience in going forward with these capital projects. They were smart projects and good things for Niles. It was a testament to his leadership."

In their time on the village board, Przybylo recalled board members, village staff and Blase going to a local restaurant after board meetings, which created lasting memories between the Niles officials.

"We would sit there and talk about everything, not village business, but everything else," Przybylo said. "We had great camaraderie and great laughter. I told Nick we should video this because we could be another McLaughlin Group. It was a real friendship. It was a great time and a special chemistry, and I wish that could happen again."

Before being elected a Niles trustee, Dean Strzelecki worked for the village's police force from 1975 through 2014, often working closely with Blase.

"The way he handled himself and the way things happened under his leadership, that message was sent all the way down the workforce," Strzelecki said. "We all learned from him how to treat your residents and your people. He set that tone that your employees are your most valuable resource in your town. He was just a great guy."

Strzelecki also praised Blase for his work in helping the village expand its tax base and services to local residents throughout the decades of his tenure.

"He was the right guy when Niles was growing," Strzelecki said. "A lot of people knew he was a tough leader, but sometimes you have to be. He knew when to be tough and when to be benevolent."

Blase's tenure as mayor, however, was not without controversy. He was arrested on federal corruption charges in 2006, and he stepped down as mayor two years later.

In 2010, Blase served time in federal prison on a conviction in a kickback scheme that involved him steering local businesses to buy insurance from a friend's company. He left a federal penitentiary in December 2010 and completed his time at a Chicago halfway house and at his house on home confinement. His sentence ended March 2, 2011.

Andrew Schneider, who authored the book "Nick Blase: The Prince of Niles, Illinois," said the former mayor has differing legacies, depending on who's asked.

"There's two parts of that legacy," Schneider said. "The financial strength of that municipality is a testament to his vision. That's something you can't ignore. There's this other legacy of the guilty plea. You can say that was not a negative either. You have a lot of people to this day at village hall that have a model of ethics and transparency on display. That guilty plea gave Niles a black eye, but you can argue that still brought a positive outcome."

Much like his competing legacies, Schneider said Blase could have dueling personalities.

"The politics were different in the 1960s and '70s," Schneider said. "He was obsessively focused on services. He was good at putting together a great municipality. He would show different faces to different people. He was a lovable guy when he wanted to be. There were people who were hurt by what he did and people hurt by the ruthlessness of his politics. In the end, I think his legacy of the village is largely positive. If you're a taxpayer in the village, you're reaping a lot of benefits from the management of Nicholas Blase, but that doesn't mean it was positive for every single person."

Services were held.

Parkinson's patients enlist in karate classes

Neurologists worked with martial arts instructors on special program

By JAVONTE ANDERSON
Chicago Tribune

The martial artists steadied their bodies on the mat, at times moving in sync, snapping their hips and torquing their ligaments to generate force with every blow.

Without breaking concentration, the students then transitioned into a choreographed routine of punches, kicks and blocks. They moved in silence as they listened to their instructor's commands.

Pedestrians peering through the lightly tinted windows as they walked past the Park Ridge dojo last week may have only noticed a group of older adults laboring to improve their skills and sharpen their technique. But for the nine Parkinson's disease patients, it is something more.

Neurologists at Rush University Medical Center have partnered with Fonseca Martial Arts, a local karate school with five locations in the Chicago area, to launch a karate program specifically designed for Parkinson's patients, mostly in their 60s, 70s and 80s.

An initial group of 19 patients with early-to-middle-stage Parkinson's underwent a series of physical and cognitive testing before joining a karate class. After attending class twice a week for 10 weeks, they were retested.

"After the results and the feedback from the first group were so positive, we knew we had to continue," said Dr. Jori Fleisher, a neurologist at Rush and lead investigator of the study, which she presented a draft of last week at the World Parkinson Congress in Japan.

Parkinson's is a progressive neurological disorder that affects the motor system, leaving patients with tremors, stiffness, a slowing of movement and difficulty with balance.

An estimated 50,000 people in the U.S. are diagnosed with Parkinson's disease each year, and about half a million people have the disease, according to the National Institutes of Health.

There are medications and other treatments to help control the symptoms, but there is no cure.

Among those who joined the karate class last year is Brad Schlicting, who was diagnosed with Parkinson's three years ago. He's noticed a significant improvement of his mobility and balance since he joined the class.

Now, at age 70, he falls less often. He feels more limber, stronger, and more confident.

"I think it's good for my attitude being able to take on a new challenge, learning a new skill and being able to hone it," Schlicting said. "It's helped me physically and mentally."

Schlicting and several other students who started last year have been promoted twice and are now orange belts.

Fleisher said the idea of the classes and the study originated when one of her Parkinson's patients suggested karate as a way to manage the symptoms of the disease.

Karate is a combination of aerobic exercise and strength training that also requires mental focus, balance and coordination. Those components exist in other forms of exercise and activity that have proven beneficial for Parkinson's patients, Fleisher said, but "karate seemed to pull all of those together in this really unified way."

And to Fleisher's surprise, there was little medical research about the benefits of karate for Parkinson's patients.

ANTONIO PEREZ/CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Brad Schlicting, center, takes part in karate classes at Fonseca Martial Arts in Park Ridge on June 6. The karate program is specifically designed for people with Parkinson's disease. At right is instructor Dejan Miloshevski.

"Why hasn't anyone looked at this before?" Fleisher recalled asking herself. "We need to get on this."

Fleisher met with John Fonseca, owner of Fonseca Martial Arts, to discuss creating a curriculum tailored to Parkinson's patients, which Fleisher could then study. They then designed a curriculum that incorporated the best karate drills and training to improve balance, stride length, strength and posture, Fonseca said.

One recent Thursday morning, the curriculum was on full display.

The students moved through the class with a subtle intensity.

"Power!" Eduardo Salgado, the karate instructor, shouted as he pushed them through drills.

But karate demands more than power. It's an art form that requires strength and grace.

The students often changed direction with each strike or block, balancing on one foot while kicking with the alternate leg.

They shuffled around cones and through obstacles, did pushups, squats and stretched. They struck targets.

"I never imagined myself being able to do karate," said Ethel Meyer, 69. "The instructors know our detriments but are super patient and work with us."

Rush is now in the second phase of the study after the pilot showed promising results.

The program, titled, "Kick Out PD," will assess how a karate class tailored for people with early-to-middle-stage Parkinson's disease improve patient-reported outcomes compared with individuals given a standard exercise regimen for the disease.

"Our initial pilot study showed that martial arts may be beneficial for individuals with Parkinson's disease by increasing mobility, balance coordination and overall well-being," Fleisher said.

If the second phase of the study, expected to conclude next year, is as successful as the pilot, Fleisher said they would like to expand the program.

"We would love to be able to train karate instructors so that this is something that's available in communities all across the country and throughout the world," she said.

Regardless of the scientific results, karate has been fruitful for most of the students.

"They're incredible," Salgado said. "They do just about everything regular students do."

They were apathetic and lacked confidence when they first began, he said.

As class began to wind down this recent morning, the enthusiasm of the class never waned. The group moved with energy.

Audible exhales and the occasional grunt filled the room. Salgado encouraged each student to finish the class with the same fervor they started with.

"Let out a Kiai!" Salgado shouted to the students as they practiced throwing punches.

"We finish with attitude." jaanderson@chicago

Five things to know about Jessica Milagros

Oak Park's plus-size model inspired by Ashley Graham

BY TRACY SWARTZ

Oak Park resident Jessica Milagros, a self-described plus-size model, is one of 10 contestants on Season 21 of "Big Brother," which premiered June 25.

The CBS series follows the contestant drama in a house outfitted with 94 high-definition cameras and 113 microphones. A house guest is voted out each week, and the winner is slated to receive $500,000.

Milagros, who attended Lane Tech College Prep and lived in the Albany Park area, was unavailable for interviews as "Big Brother" filming got underway. Here's what we know about her.

1. Milagros said she got the idea to model while working for a Chicago marketing firm and researching the industry to pitch Lane

2. The 37-year-old, who has Puerto Rican roots, counts model Ashley Gra-

3. Last year, JCPenney tapped Milagros to serve as the brand ambassador for the chain's Boutique Plus swimwear line. Milagros collaborated with the design team on the fit and style of each piece, according to J.C. Penney.

4. "Big Brother" is not her first TV appearance. She modeled a bathing suit on Steve Harvey's talk show, which used to be filmed in Chicago, in 2013.

5. She joined the "Big Brother" cast because she's a big fan and she "saw a lack of representation of someone that looked like me on the show," she told "Entertainment Tonight Canada."

Three arrested in residential burglary

BY MARISSA PLESCIA

Three men were arrested in connection with the burglary of a Niles home last week, according to the Niles Police Department.

Duro Ivanov, 50, of Chicago, and Aco Ivanov, 47, of Gurnee, were charged with residential burglary and possession of burglary tools, both felonies, according to a release from Niles police, and Ali Moro, 18, of Mundelein, was charged with misdemeanor theft.

Around 9:55 p.m. on June 14, police said, a homeowner in the 7900 block of Oketa Avenue reported arriving home to find his house ransacked, with jewelry worth about $3,000, a laptop and about $700 cash among the items missing.

A burglary task force was already in the process of tracking the men in connection with another burglary, Niles Police Commander Robert Tornabene said, when police stopped a car containing the three in Glenview about a half-hour later.

A Niles police officer at the scene of the burglary provided details about some of the belongings taken from the home and similar items were found in the car.

The three were arrested and have a preliminary court date of July 8 in Skokie.

According to the release, the residential burglary charges can result in anywhere from 4 to 15 years in prison and/or a $25,000 fine, and the possession of burglary tools charge can result in 1 to 3 years in prison and/or a fine of up to $25,000. The theft charge could lead to a sentence of up to 364 days in jail and a $2,500 fine, authorities said.

Aco Ivanov's bail was set at $40,000 and Duro Ivanov's bail was $30,000, and both were released after paying a 10 percent bond.

Neither Aco Ivanov nor Duro Ivanov could be reached for comment.

Moro, whose bond information was unavailable, also couldn't be reached for comment.

Lincolnwood to pay almost $4.3 million for sewer project

BY PHIL ROCKROHR

Lincolnwood has awarded nearly $4.3 million in contracts to build an outfall sewer under North Shore Avenue that officials hope will help reduce residential basement flooding during heavy rains.

The Village Board voted 5-1 earlier this month to award a $3.95 million contract to DiMeo Brothers of Elk Grove Village to build the sewer and a $306,289 contract to Christopher Burke Engineering of Rosemont to provide construction oversight of the project.

The outfall sewer is one of 10 projects intended to increase flooding protection in Lincolnwood from a two- or three-year rainfall event to a 10-year event.

PIONEER PRESS

The village's current sewer system combines stormwater and household waste, according to a public works report presented to the board before the vote.

"Large storms result in the village's combined sewage discharging directly into area waterways or into the lowest point of the system, often residential basements, due to sewer pipe sizes that are too small to handle the large volume of water," the report said.

Village President Barry Bass cast the super-majority vote necessary to waive bids to allow Burke to provide oversight as part of the package. Trustee Ronald Cope was absent. Trustee Jesal Patel voted electronically.

Trustee Georjean Hlepas Nichol, who voted against the contracts, did not return calls requesting comment.

Trustee Craig Klatzco said he was "extremely unhappy" that village staff did not anticipate some $678,000 in additional costs that were discovered during design of the sewer project.

"That's a little hard to eat," said Klatzco, who nonetheless voted in favor of the contracts.

Public Works Director Andrew Letson said some of the additional costs, such as sidewalk and curb replacements, were anticipated, but came in higher than expected.

"We found that the street is much flatter than anticipated," Letson said. "It does not have the necessary pitch for water to drain to intersections."

The preliminary project design did not reach a stage where it identified the need for full curb replacement, Village Engineer Jim Amelio said.

Klatzco also asked whether staff had planned the unexpected sidewalk improvements to be compliant with the Americans with Disabilities Act.

Amelio called Klatzco's comment a "good question" and estimated such modifications might cost the village an extra 25 percent for sidewalks.

"We can confer with the appropriate parties and determine the best course of action," Letson said.

Village Manager Anne Marie Gaura said on future capital projects as large as the outfall sewer, staff will recommend a larger scope of work in advance to avoid such large cost overruns.

"Or as we get in detail on the project, if the scope changes, we will come back to the board to identify how the scope has changed before going out to bid," Gaura said.

Staff was able to reduce the cost overruns by $219,065 by removing a storm sewer from the project and by rebidding the installation of vortex flow restrictors and manhole covers.

The board almost didn't vote on the complex contracts and their funding sources, until Letson said a Metropolitan Water Reclamation District grant to fund almost half of the project would eventually expire and Amelio said the work would not be completed by the end of the year if the board waited until July to vote on the contracts.

After the vote, Patel reminded trustees and Bass that they can call special meetings, if needed, for urgent matters such as the contracts.

Montessori school seeks to redevelop Park Ridge office site

BY JENNIFER JOHNSON

A Montessori school is looking to return to Park Ridge in a building on Peterson Avenue that it would expand and remodel.

Brickton Montessori School presented conceptual plans to the Park Ridge Planning and Zoning Commission on June 11, outlining a proposal to demolish an existing office building at 1410 W. Higgins Road and use the building behind it at 1411 Peterson Ave. A parking lot with a roundabout would replace the offices that face Higgins, the proposal said.

But the city's Higgins Corridor Plan, adopted in 2010, calls for an office or mixed-use development on the property, which is located east of Mr. K Garden and Material Center and south of a residential area. Planning and Zoning Commissioner Jim Argionis noted that a school would be "outside the spirit and intent" of the development plan, but said he was "torn" between following the vision of the corridor plan and supporting the school, which he said could draw other development.

"If we were to get additional [public] benefits for the city, I might be persuaded," Argionis said.

A drawback would be the potential loss of property tax on the land. Representatives of Brickton Montessori indicated that the school is a nonprofit, and Planning and Zoning Commissioner Clayton Hutchinson said it would be exempt from paying local property taxes on land it owns.

Attorney Anastas Shkurti, representing Brickton, said the current properties at 1410 Higgins Road and 1411 Peterson Avenue generate about $5,000 in property taxes to the city and, in 2017, generated $22,420 in taxes to Park Ridge-Niles School District 64.

Brickton Montessori, which is located less than a mile south of Higgins Road at 8622 W. Catalpa Ave. in Chicago, attempted unsuccessfully to relocate to Park Ridge 19 years ago. The planning and zoning commission denied a request from the school to convert an office building at 315 S. Northwest Highway into classroom use.

At the time, several residents objected to the property being removed from the tax rolls, the Park Ridge Herald-Advocate reported, and several townhouses have been built there since.

Shkurti said there are 153 students enrolled at Brick-ton, with 34 from Park Ridge. Principal Cheryl LaCost said she anticipates the number of Park Ridge children will increase if Brickton relocates, saying a renovated and revitalized school will be "a magnet" for parents looking at educational options.

LaCost said Brickton Montessori began 30 years ago in the basement of St. Anselm's Episcopal Church, which was located at 1600 N. Greenwood Ave. in Park Ridge.

"We would love to come back to Park Ridge, to our roots," LaCost said. "We continually have had a large contingent of Park Ridge families."

No action was taken by the planning and zoning commission, and City Planner Jon Branham said the development team has the option of returning with a revised concept plan if more input from the commission is sought.

A planned development application would need to be approved by the planning and zoning commission and Park Ridge City Council before the school could develop the properties.

The Park Ridge Public Library's summer reading club will again give kids the chance to hunt for its official mascot, Funky Monkey.

Now through Aug. 18, Funky Monkey will be making appearances at Park Ridge businesses and children can find him by reading the clues posted in the Children's Department, the library said. This year's summer reading clubs are entitled "A Universe of Stories" and feature a space theme. They are open to children, teens and adults.

The simple joy of a perfect ice cube in the summer

RANDY BLASER

Is there anything more precious, more wonderful, more exotic and more satisfying than ice in summer?

I'm not talking about the weather horror that was visited upon us just a few short months ago. I'm talking about the wonderful frozen water that comes out of your freezer and goes into a cocktail.

Ice that comes in cubes on a hot summer day is one of the greatest things about living in the United States. You just can't get ice everywhere when it is hot. But here, ice in the summer is plentiful.

When used properly, fresh, cold ice may be just the kicker that makes us civilized.

Think of it.

You're hot and thirsty after mowing the lawn or doing some yard work. You want a glass of ice-cold water. You just open the fridge and take out some cubes, or press the ice dispenser button in the refrigerator door and ... viola! ... you have ice!

That's luxury.

One of the greatest sounds is the sharp crack that an aluminum ice tray makes when you lift the lever to release the cubes. Aluminum ice trays have gone the way of refrigerators that have to be defrosted, but compared to today's plastic trays, they were a thing of beauty in design and function. (You can still get them in some specialty catalogs.)

The modern age brings us all sorts of ice benefits, from funny or cute shapes of ice, to large square cubes that take a long time to melt as your cocktail cools. We now even have giant, round, golf-ball-sized ice cubes that are wonderful in a glass with two measures of bourbon.

There are times, however, when you need a lot of ice. But not to worry. Since we live in the United States and not a socialist country (at least not yet) bagged ice is plentiful.

Is there any better feeling in summer than opening a cooler filled with ice and your favorite beverages and plunging your hand into the frigid contents to pull out a can or bottle of that thirst-quenching elixir you favor?

I don't think so.

As I said, ice can come in many shapes and sizes, but one of the greatest wonders is the crystal clear kind. It is so rare you have to pay extra for it at the grocery store or gas station.

I once visited a home whose owner boasted all day about the ice machine he owned that made crystal clear ice. I'm not sure about the technology, but the cubes were so beautiful it was sad to see them melt.

Apparently, there are ways to make your own clear ice cubes, but that job involves freezing just a top layer of water in a cooler, a hammer, a chisel and a saw.

As much as I like ice, especially clear ice, that does seem just a bit too much trouble.

I'll gladly just pay the extra buck or two at the corner gas station.

ADVICE

Don't let cancer take your life away while you're still livingJACKIE PILOSOPH
Love Essentially

When Susan Munic was diagnosed with cancer, she asked herself a question: Would she lie in bed or would she get up and go? Her choice: Live life, for as long and as fully as she could.

"Cancer can be exhausting, but don't let it restrict you," said Munic, a North Shore mom and restaurant owner who's no stranger to the disease she's lived with for five years. "Be in touch with your body, know your limits and listen to your doctor, but otherwise continue your daily life. Every day is a new day for which I feel happy to be feeling well."

Munic's journey started in 2014, when after about a year of feeling exhausted and run-down, she went to the doctor, had some tests and found out she had multiple myeloma, a rare blood cancer. Her sister died of the disease in 1999 at age 37.

"The first thing I thought of was my sister, and I was determined that I would outlive my mom. Because she had already buried my sister and how could she lose another daughter?" Munic said.

After undergoing major surgery and four months of chemotherapy, Munic had a stem cell transplant in 2016. She currently is considered to be in remission.

"For the first 18 months after the diagnosis, I felt like a wreck," she said. "The treatment also took a toll on my body and it exhausted me."

How did she survive? According to Munic, her motivation came from her husband, Freddy Sanchez, their blended family of four kids — and her passion for the Mexican restaurant she and Freddy own and manage, Taco Vida in Deerfield, which is celebrating its first anniversary this month.

"Work gives me a purpose that is more than just being a cancer patient. Being able to be productive made me feel like cancer was secondary. I love what we do. I love our customers. It's fun to educate people about what homemade Mexican food is and watch them taste Freddy's creations," said Munic.

Munic met Sanchez in 2009, while both were working at The Happ Inn in Northfield. Munic was a server and Sanchez a well-known chef. Both were divorced with kids.

"We are from different worlds, but we both felt this instant, crazy connection,"

ISTOCK

Cancer survivor Susan Munic says the key to her getting through her cancer diagnosis was continuing to live her life.

said Munic, who also ran Taco Nano with Sanchez. A year after they met, they were married.

Munic said that when she was diagnosed with cancer, Freddy was devastated but extremely supportive.

"He did everything for me. He was nurturing and caring and loving, and for a person who knew nothing about this and be thrown into it, he picked up all the slack," she said. "I never felt like I had to worry about anything because Freddy was going to take care of it."

"From the first day, she was very strong. I never saw panic in her," Sanchez said of his wife. "I am very proud of her. She's helped me so much. She's so smart and she's a blessing."

Munic's advice to others facing cancer: Don't be embarrassed or ashamed to ask for help, both mentally and physically.

"You are not alone," she said. "There are ways to get through this, but it starts with a support system. If you don't have a strong one, find a community to lean on. There are so many resources out there that can help. I can't stress the importance of good mental health during cancer."

I've encountered Susan and Freddy a few times at their restaurants, and I have to say, their love for each other seems every bit as wonderful as Freddy's famous guacamole — which, by the way, is the best I've ever tasted.

It's love, family and work that Munic said defines her. Not cancer.

"I'm the type of person who lives day to day and I don't live by statistics," she said. "Initially, I feared I would have a life of chronic pain and misery and hospitals, and I don't have that. I feel like I can do anything. I choose life and happiness instead of a sad, depressed, poor-me attitude."

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING AND JOINT REVIEW BOARD MEETING TO CONSIDER THE DESIGNATION OF THE REDEVELOPMENT PROJECT AREA FOR THE PROPOSED SKOKIE OAKTON STREET/NILES AVENUE REDEVELOPMENT PROJECT AREA AND THE APPROVAL OF A REDEVELOPMENT PLAN AND PROJECT IN RELATION THERETO

Notice is hereby given that a public hearing will be held on Monday, August 19, 2019, at 8:00 p.m. at the Skokie Village Council Chambers, 5127 Oakton Street, Skokie, Illinois 60077 (the "Public Hearing"), in regard to the proposed designation of a redevelopment project area (the "Redevelopment Project Area"), and the proposed approval of a redevelopment plan and project (the "Redevelopment Plan and Project") in relation thereto, for the proposed Oakton Street/Niles Avenue Redevelopment Project Area (the "TIF District"), pursuant to the provisions of the "Tax Increment Allocation Redevelopment Act," 65 ILCS 5/11-74.4-1 et seq., as amended (the "TIF Act").

The boundaries of the Redevelopment Project Area for the proposed TIF District are more fully set forth on the legal description attached hereto as Exhibit "1" and made part hereof and the common boundary description made part hereof.

The proposed Redevelopment Plan and Project provides for land acquisition and assembly, improvements to the public infrastructure within the proposed Redevelopment Project Area and for the Village of Skokie (the "Village") to implement a set of actions to promote redevelopment within the proposed Redevelopment Project Area. The contemplated Village actions include, but are not limited to: encouraging redevelopment agreements; facilitating the preparation of improved and vacant sites, by assisting private developers to assemble suitable sites for modern development needs; coordinating site preparation to provide additional land for new development, as appropriate; fostering the replacement, repair and/or improvement of infrastructure, including (as needed) sidewalks, streets, curbs, gutters, and underground water and sanitary systems to facilitate the construction of new development within the Redevelopment Project Area; facilitating the provision of adequate on- and off-street parking within the Redevelopment Project Area; and fostering the rehabilitation, repair and remodeling of existing buildings within the Redevelopment Project Area. The Village would realize the goals and objectives of the Redevelopment Plan and Project through public finance techniques including, but not limited to, tax increment allocation financing.

The Village's Eligibility Report and the Redevelopment Plan and Project have been on file with the Village since June 7, 2019, and are currently on file and available for public inspection between the hours of 8:30 a.m. and 5:00 p.m., Monday through Friday, except holidays, at the office of Pramod Shah, Village Clerk for the Village of Skokie, at 5127 Oakton Street, Skokie, Illinois 60077. Copies of the Eligibility Report and the Redevelopment Plan and Project are enclosed with the copies of this Notice that are being mailed to the affected taxing districts and the Illinois Department of Commerce and Economic Opportunity, Leslie Murray, Economic Development Specialist for the Village of Skokie (847) 673-0500 or Robert Rychlicki of Kuehne, McKenna and Associates, Inc. (312) 444-1702 can be contacted for further information.

Pursuant to the TIF Act, the Joint Review Board for the proposed TIF District (the "JRB") is being convened to review the public record, planning documents, Eligibility Report and the proposed ordinances approving the Redevelopment Project Area and the Redevelopment Plan and Project for the proposed TIF District. Pursuant to the TIF Act, the JRB shall consist of one (1) public member and one (1) representative from each of the following taxing districts: Oakton Community College District No. 525; Niles Township High School District No. 219; Skokie/Morton Grove School District No. 69; Cook County, Niles Township; the Skokie Park District; and the Village of Skokie.

Pursuant to the TIF Act, the meeting of the JRB will be held on Thursday July 11, 2019 at 3:00 p.m. at the Skokie Village Hall, Council Chambers, 5127 Oakton Street, Skokie, Illinois 60077. Those taxing districts with representatives on the JRB are hereby notified of said JRB meeting. The JRB's recommendation relative to the Redevelopment Project Area and Redevelopment Plan and Project for the proposed TIF District shall be advisory and non-binding and shall be adopted by a majority vote of those members of the JRB that are present and voting and submitted to the Village within thirty (30) days after the first convening of the JRB. Failure of the JRB to submit its report on a timely basis shall not delay the Public Hearing, nor shall it delay any other step in the process of designating the Redevelopment Project Area or approving the Redevelopment Plan and Project for the proposed TIF District.

Prior to and at the August 19, 2019 Public Hearing, all interested persons, taxpayers, affected taxing districts and the Illinois Department of Commerce and Economic Opportunity may file with the Village Clerk written comments to and may be heard orally with respect to any issues regarding the proposed Redevelopment Project Area and Redevelopment Plan and Project for the proposed TIF District. Written comments are invited and can be sent in advance of the Public Hearing to the Skokie Village Clerk, 5127 Oakton Street, Skokie, Illinois 60077. The Public Hearing may be adjourned by the Village Board without further notice other than a motion to be entered upon the minutes of the Public Hearing, fixing the time and place of the subsequent Public Hearing.

Harvesting surgical keepsakes

Body parts, medical devices often can go home with you

BY KERI WIGINTON
Chicago Tribune

She wanted to keep that shiny silver half-circle. It helped her climb the Adirondacks and the foothills of Mount Rainer. It supported her as she strolled vineyards in Italy and hoisted her leg up rocks in Utah. So when a surgeon replaced Barbara Brotman's decades-old hip ball, she asked for the old one back.

"I wanted to own it as a memento, as a connection to my surgeon who had died, who I felt I owed a great deal," said Brotman, senior assistant director of development communications for University of Chicago Medicine and Biological Sciences, and a former Tribune columnist.

Brotman was only 17 when she smashed part of her pelvis during a trek through the Grand Canyon. The damage was severe, and she needed something artificial to put her back together. A person so young could retain mobility for longer with a partial, instead of a total, hip replacement, her doctor urged.

"It was a very hard operation to do. It failed frequently," said Brotman. "He did it because of my age. He didn't want me to have an operation every 10 years. It would have been a nightmare."

That metal cap, which looks like a rounded cocktail glass that could fit in the palm of your hand, kept her biking, hiking and skiing for four decades, until she had a total hip replacement a few years ago. Although she thought her request to retain it might come across as unusual, Brotman said her surgeon was unfazed. All she had to do was sign some releases before her surgical souvenir was sterilized and presented to her "shiny as the day it was put in."

While some states like Louisiana, Georgia and Mississippi have legislation against owning human remains, there is no federal law against taking organs, tissue or devices home after surgery, though there are some limitations. If you're getting something removed, here's what you need to know if you want to hold onto it.

Whom do you ask?

Everything goes through the pathology department, which your doctor can contact. The Chicago-area hospitals I talked to, including medical centers with Northwestern, Rush and the University of Chicago, said not a lot of people are clamoring for their medical leftovers, but you can ask.

Dr. Jon Lomasney, a pathologist and associate professor of pathology at Northwestern Medicine, told me that patients or families who have power of attorney or next of kin for the deceased can legally request the return of organs or devices, including pacemakers, defibrilla-tors or a hip, like Brotman's.

"We are obligated to make those available," said Lomasney, who added that interested parties are informed of infectious hazards and must sign paperwork absolving the hospital of liability.

But there are some restrictions. You can't leave with radioactive material or anything that would be an extreme risk to a patient or the public. Lomasney said that includes portions of the body infected with a hard-to-kill pathogen like Creutzfeldt-Jakob, Ebola or drug-resistant tuberculosis. There are some instances where public health authorities use special processes for handling and disposal that the general public couldn't follow, he said.

Even if the tissue isn't dangerous, not everything survives the scrutiny required for an adequate diagnosis. If you have a mole removed or a biopsy — like a lumpectomy for breast cancer — it's usually not intact after the inspection. "Some things get sectioned like a loaf of bread," said Lomasney. "The organ wouldn't be recognizable if it's a cyst or a kidney because it's all chopped into pieces."

If there is something left after pathology is finished, which can take weeks, then it's all yours. Small body parts and tissue are "fixed" in a container filled with a combination of formaldehyde and water. Formalin is a toxic respiratory irritant and a possible carcinogen, Lomasney warned, so it has to be handled professionally. The mixture needs to be changed every decade or so, but it would preserve whatever is in it for more than a lifetime.

"The specimen would remain in pristine condition — as long as it's kept in formalin — for centuries," said Lomasney.

Devices need extra inspection

A colleague told Lomasney that a patient with cardiomyopathy, a disease that makes it hard to pump blood through the body, had a defibrillator turned into a keychain after receiving a heart transplant. The patient felt nostalgic for the mechanism that had been a lifesaver so many times before. Sometimes family members will ask for the return of a device after autopsy, he said.

But before it can be taken home, anything electrical needs to be examined and permanently shut off.

"If a child were to play with it and it discharged, it could introduce a lethal arrhythmia," said Lomasney. "It also has a lithium battery. If someone were to dispose of it in the fireplace, it could explode."

Northwestern Memorial Hospital's policy is to send FDA-regulated devices — defibrillators, pacemakers, prosthetic valves, hips — back to the company that created them so they can evaluate the product for quality, safety and effectiveness. That's the best way to make the next generation better, Lomasney said. Afterward, the patient or family member will get the apparatus safe, clean and "in a Tiffany-style box."

"It is really important for the device to go to the manufacturer first," said Lomasney. "It's really a win-win for everybody."

Why not keep it?

Saving something that came out of your body might seem strange, but my mother took a few gallstones for the road after doctors removed the organ that kept filling up with them. Brotman's daughter, Nina Berman, had her wisdom tooth made into a necklace by a taxidermy friend who suspended it in gold-flaked glycerin inside an empty shotgun shell.

"Honestly, it didn't occur to me not to want it," said Berman. "I already had a solid collection of bones, stones and pelts — plus a knife with a deer hoof as a handle, so of course I'd want my own tooth from my head."

As for her mom, that metal hip was too important to discard. Even though Brotman couldn't keep walking through forests or commuting to work with it, she still wanted it around. "I don't have it on display because it feels a little gross, but I feel like it's an important part of my personal history," said Brotman. "I'm really grateful to it."

Catch the patriotic spirit with '1776'

Musical offers comedy, drama set during the Second Continental Congress

BY MYRNA PETLICKI

Politics can be contentious. That's been a fact of life in our country since its founding.

An early battle is played out in MadKap Productions' staging of "1776" by Peter Stone (book) and Sherman Edwards (music and lyrics) June 28-July 21 at the Skokie Theatre.

Performances are 7:30 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays, and 2 p.m. Sundays, with a 1:30 p.m. matinee July 10.

"It's a very smart, witty show with lots of strong characters, plus a combination of comedy and drama," said director Wayne Mell. "Also, it's a very strong civics lesson without taking sides. It talks about the Declaration and the Constitution and the starting of government and those are things that lately have meant a lot to me because the country is very polarized politically right now."

John Adams, played by Sean Michael Barrett, is the most forceful presence at the Second Continental Congress, where the issue of whether or not to declare independence from England is debated.

"He is a little bit obnoxious and disliked, and he's loud," Barrett said of Adams. "But he's very passionate and he believes in this cause that he's fighting for, which is independence."

Adams is the driving force behind that cause.

The show offers the actor some challenges, including the fact that Adams "never seems to shut his mouth," Barrett said. He also noted that this character "is a little bit outside of my normal wheelhouse of roles that I play. Normally I'm the funny guy."

Barrett isn't complaining, though. He enjoys the fact that Adams "says whatever's on his mind. He doesn't care what anybody else says."

To prepare for this part, Barrett's research included reading a biography of Adams by David McCullough, watching a mini-series about his character, and reading letters that Adams and his wife Abigail wrote to each other.

MADKAP PRODUCTIONS

Sean Michael Barrett and Gretchen Kimmeth are John and Abigail Adams in "1776" by MadKap Productions at the Skokie Theatre June 28-July 21.

'1776'

When: June 28-July 21

Where: MadKap Productions at Skokie Theatre, 7924 Lincoln Ave., Skokie

Tickets: $45; $38 seniors

Information: 847-677-7761; skokietheatre.org

The research was enjoyable for Barrett, who is a history buff. "As far as history goes, the Revolutionary/Colonial Period is my favorite, so doing this show is a real treat," he said.

Barrett is particularly moved by a couple of lines Adams speaks in the play in opposition to slavery, calling those who are enslaved citizens. "He says, 'They are people and they are here. If there is any other requirement, I have not heard of it.'"

A more moderate voice at the Congress is Ben Franklin, played by Edward Kuffert. "He's a voice of reason," the actor said.

"Ben Franklin in this show is a remarkably cheerful human being," Kuffert said. He noted that he learned from reading about his character that, "Franklin was a man who really enjoyed life. He was smart, he was funny, and he knew it."

Kuffert knew quite a bit about the Revolutionary Period before he took this role but he did additional research to prepare for it.

The actor observed that Franklin was an "internationalist" rather than "a nation-state kind of guy. He showed the ability to work with all kinds of people — different kinds of personalities and different cultural styles. He's very adaptive."

There's a lesson for today in this play, Kuffert indicated. "You can watch an example of how very disparate, very antagonistic personalities manage to make compromises work," he said.

Director Mell insisted, "We're not making a political statement with this show but we are advocating for the Declaration and the Constitution and how our government is still the best one in the world."

Reading for summer, if summer ever actually arrives

SARA CLARKSON

On summer evenings, I like to sit on the patio and read as the sun sets. These days mosquitoes swarm out there. The furniture is damp, and I will have to put a sweater on. When is summer going to begin, so I can start my summer reading? I am going to get behind if it doesn't start soon.

As a sharp contrast to this frustrating weather, I am picking up the last of the three Rosie novels, this one called "The Rosie Result" by Graeme Simsion. The first of the series The Rosie Project is, and I am not exaggerating, laugh-out-loud funny.

The Rosie stories are about a man named Don, a scientist who is also on the autism spectrum, and his search for a wife; he finds one named Rosie. They marry and have a child, and by this the third book, Don and Rosie must figure out whether to have their son Hudson assessed for being on the autism spectrum as well as deal with some other challenges both at work and at home.

I've heard that this is not as funny, but the books are remarkably light without being syrupy and at the same time smart without being too challenging.

A novel with a bit more heft that sounds interesting because all things from Africa are interesting in our household right now, is the recently released "Bakhita: A Novel of the Saint of Sudan" by Veronique Olmi. This work is based the true story of a young girl who at age 7 is snatched into slavery in Sudan. She undergoes numerous challenges before winding up in Italy, where she seeks a spiritual path and ultimately becomes a saint. It has been praised as a story full of wonder.

My husband and I are both going to read "The Second Mountain: The Quest for a Moral Life" by David Brooks. We have found his previous books, especially "The Road to Character," to be provocative and enlightening yet easy to read and digest.

A priest, theologian and scholar by the name of Richard Rohr wrote "Falling Upward," which my husband and I read a few years ago. Rohr's point is that the first part of a person's life is about establishing themselves, their egos and their security, but that the second half should be about sharing wisdom and experiences and developing meaning.

This new David Brooks book seems like his take on that, on leading a meaningful life in an increasingly self-absorbed world.

"Educated: A Memoir" by Tara Westover is on one of my book club lists this year and has appeared on numerous lists for absorbing nonfiction. Westover talks about what it was like to grow up completely off the grid in Idaho's mountains.

She never attended school until she was 17, yet she has earned degrees from Brigham Young University, Harvard and Cambridge. Her parents were survivalists and the family felt the end of the world was nigh.

Another memoir generating a lot of interest is "Sea Stories: My Life in Special Operations" by William H. McRaven. McRaven is the admiral in the Navy who oversaw the Osama Bin Laden raid and who wrote a bestselling book titled "Make Your Bed."

Veering from all that adrenaline is "Maybe You Should Talk to Someone: A Therapist, Her Therapist, And Our Lives Revealed" by Lori Gottlieb, a popular psychotherapist. This is the inside scoop on therapy, apparently, what makes it work and not work.

While I do not have a lot of personal experience with this topic — and truly that is to my detriment and not a testament to emotional soundness — I wonder about it often. I see some people bloom and flourish and others use their therapists as data dumpsters, only talking never listening.

Last, another book club book is "Frankenstein" by Mary Shelley. Of course this is a classic and of course I am totally picturing Boris Karloff in the 1931 movie, which was long before my time, but the book itself was published in 1818. The movie and other modern interpretations have distracted from the book's original themes. Some consider it the first example of science fiction. Mary Shelley was only 18 when she wrote it.

Last, I have to give a shout out to the late P.M. Forni, who died last December. He wrote "Choosing Civility" as well as "The Civility Solution," two books which make so much sense, offer us and others so much dignity and respect, and talk about some basic ways to behave, to keep the rhetoric down and tempers cool.

OK, maybe if it is going to be a rainy and gray summer, I have enough reading to keep me warm and sunny.

Sister Michelle celebrated at Trinity High School

BY RACHEL K. HINDERY

In 2018, Trinity High School celebrated its River Forest centennial and then in late May celebrated the 27-year presidency of Sister Michelle Germanson, OP, who brought the school to and beyond that milestone.

"I look around and I know the world is a better place because Trinity-empowered women are in it," the retiring Sister Michelle said to the crowd gathered in the athletic facility bearing her name.

Interim President Sister Judith Schaefer, OP, presented her a gift and said, "My work is to build on the strong foundation of empowering women that Sister Michelle has planted so deeply in Trinity's roots."

Arianna Lebab, 16, said the centennial was inspirational.

"It felt really empowering to be part of such a big community," said Lebab, class of 2020. "It was a powerful moment that me and my classmates shared together."

When Sister Michelle began serving as Trinity's president after being dean of students at Rosary College — now Dominican University — she said the school faced enrollment challenges. Some wondered if the all-girls school could survive, but the new president felt at home immediately as she walked the campus.

Nancy Marks Riley, class of 1952, said Trinity had strong academics and Catholic traditions with its chapel being a quiet haven. Sister Michelle took steps to strengthen those basics.

In the mid 1990s, Trinity became the first Catholic school in Illinois to offer International Baccalaureate (IB) programing, and the first to offer full block scheduling, she said.

"We've been so fortunate to have a mission that is so close to the IB mission," IB Director Rose Crnkovich said, adding that both programs emphasize not only stellar academics but co-curricular activities and service to develop the whole person.

Interim President Sister Judith Schaefer presents Sister Michelle with a gift at a retirement ceremony in Trinity High School's Sister Michelle Germanson Athletic Facility on May 29.

"As a teacher in those early days, it was inspirational," she said. "I fell in love with my subject matter all over again and shared that renewed passion with my students."

Christine Bollettino said she served on the board with Sister Michelle, and later helped raise funds for the athletic facility.

"She taught me a lot, and she instilled in me the importance of connection and always keeping the mission of Trinity in the forefront," Bollettino said.

Marks Riley said seeing the new gym brought back memories of a warped gym floor.

Kate Perschke, class of 2017, said, "I was one of the first classes to really utilize the gym. That was a selling point for the school, and my class developed a love of fitness."

Surrounded by generations of Trinity Blazers, Sister Michelle said, "I'm overwhelmed by the love in this room. You are my life. It's been my grace; my blessing, to be part of your life."

District 64 agrees on spending for floor work

BY HEATHER CHERONE

The Park Ridge-Niles School District 64 board agreed to spend no more than $300,000 to level the floor of the Washington Elementary School auditorium to allow it to be used for music, art and as a flexible learning space in an effort to help alleviate overcrowding.

The board voted 5-0 on the expenditure June 20 to allow staff to move forward with the construction as quickly as possible in an effort to complete the work before school starts in August.

Bids for the work were scheduled to be opened June 21 and will likely be approved July 15.

Board members Rebecca Little and Fred Sanchez were not present at the meeting.

The District 64 Board discusses a plan to turn the auditorium at Washington Elementary School into a multipurpose room on June 20, 2019.

Board Vice President Tom Sotos said he voted for the expenditure despite misgivings about the district's "piecemeal" approach to overcrowding at its seven elementary schools.

"I'm having a really difficult time with this," Sotos said. "We need a district-wide plan."

The renovation of the auditorium was recommended by a committee of eight parents and teachers asked by the board to craft a solution to overcrowding at Washington Elementary School.

That committee is expected to submit its plan for a long-term solution to overcrowding at Washington on July 15.

Board President Rick Biagi said the committee is likely to recommend the construction of an annex at the school that includes several classrooms but not a new multipurpose room, since that need would be filled by the renovated auditorium.

Based on enrollment projections, Washington Elementary in Park Ridge could grow by two-and-a-half classrooms for the 2019-20 academic year, which the school does not have enough space to accommodate, officials said.

Kindergarten, first grade and fourth grade may need to add classrooms, according to a report prepared for the board.

With several classes already being taught art and music in their homeroom by a teacher who moves from class to class with a cart, there is no room left to add additional classrooms in order to keep the sizes of the class below the district's guidelines.

However, student enrollment has so far fallen below projections, and adding classroom space is not required at this time, said Chief School Business Official Luann Kolstad.

In other action, the board hired Angela Phillips to serve as the assistant director of student services. Phillips, who will start July 1, replaces Sue Waughon and will be paid $102,000 annually.

Waughon, who was hired by the district in July 2018, has taken a position at another school district, said Bernadette Tramm, District 64 spokeswoman.

The board meeting June 20 was also the last for Superintendent Laurie Heinz, who is leaving District 64 to take the top job at Community Consolidated School District 15 in Palatine. She will be replaced by Eric Olson on July 1.

Forest preserves to pursue deer 'culling' program

River Forest joins effort to reduce population

By STEVE SCHERING

With dozens of residents reporting property and landscaping damage due to local deer, the village of River Forest said it is partnering with the Forest Preserve District of Cook County in seeking to reduce the local deer population.

During an informational meeting June 24, River Forest officials invited Tim Preuss of the Illinois Department of Natural Resources to discuss native deer in the area and offer tips to homeowners dealing with local wildlife.

During that meeting, village officials spoke of their plans to pursue a "culling" or deer reduction program, with the forest preserves.

"One of the challenges River Forest has in doing a deer culling program is we don't have any municipal property to have a program of our own," village administrator Eric Palm said. "We do have a partner with the Forest Preserve District of Cook County. We started having conversations about doing a deer maintenance or management program on forest preserve property."

Palm said both parties are looking at using Thatcher Woods property just north of Chicago Avenue and south of North Avenue as an area to target the local deer population.

"The forest preserve has to go out and do surveys and start to do a count of how many deer they believe are in this area," Palm said. "They are out doing that now. Should an application go forward to manage or cull the deer, that would come from the forest preserve. They would hire a contractor and, many times, it's the U.S. Department of Agriculture who have licensed sharpshooters to come out and do what they have to do to manage the population."

According to Palm, a culling season typically begins Dec. 1 and wraps up by March 31 the following year. He said the village is targeting this winter to begin a culling program.

The joint application would require an intergovernmental agreement between the village and forest preserve, which would outline final costs shared between the two entities.

"My research shows it's about $1,000 per deer," Palm said. "You need licensed sharpshooters and we are in an urban area, so we know we have to exercise safety. This is a multi-year program. This isn't something we're going to handle and accomplish all in that first year. The county is going out and doing their due diligence, they will give us that info and we'll put it together to spell out all the costs."

By a show of hands, a majority of the dozens in attendance at the meeting said they were in favor of pursuing the program.

"We've seen a dramatic increase in deer over the last few years," resident David Franek said. "We've seen 11 deer at one time on our property or on Oak Street."

Should a culling occur, Franek said he would prefer a culling program with a bow and arrow over a rifle, citing less of a chance of ricochet or accidental discharge.

"Something has to be done because we've lost hundreds of dollars in landscaping," Franek said.

While hunting is the primary tool in controlling deer populations in Illinois, Preuss said that can be a challenge in urban areas like River Forest.

Preuss urged homeowners to never feed deer, either intentionally or unintentionally, cover up food sources such as bird feeders or garbage cans and limit access to landscaping and vegetable gardens. According to Preuss, a fence height of 8 feet is preferred, but a minimum of 6 feet is needed to protect most gardens.

Village officials said all resident complaints would continue to be documented and forwarded as part of the culling application process, while board members pledged to keep pursuing the mitigation program.

"If we do, as a board, agree to it, it sounds like that's what the residents want," Village President Cathy Adduci said. "We'll come back to you guys with a plan. We want to get this not only right, but it should be maintained for years."

Anyone with questions about deer or local wildlife is asked to contact Preuss at 847-798-7620 or at timothy.preuss@illinois.gov.

STEVE METRO

Wild deer are shown in the backyard of a home in the 700 block of Park Avenue in River Forest on May 29. With an increase in deer being spotted in residential areas, the village is seeking to start a culling program to reduce the native deer population.

Mid-engine dream lives in new Corvette

Expect impressive performance, sticker shock when next generation debuts in July

By CASEY WILLIAMS
Tribune News Service

On July 18, Chevrolet will launch the eighth generation of its iconic sports car — what it calls the “first-ever mid-engine Corvette.” Not true.

While the C8 Corvette will be the first mid-engine version to reach showrooms, it is not the first to be designed, engineered, seriously considered, nor even green-lighted for production since the model's 1953 launch. So, why is it happening now?

“It brings the ‘Vette closer to exotic cars — the Ford GT is an easy comparison,” said Jessica Caldwell, executive director of industry analysis at Edmunds. “It’s GM’s time to shine with a technology showcase. Performance will be extremely impressive, but the price point, expected to be over $100,000, will give Chevrolet more room to put in ‘technology.’”

When Tesla sedans outrun your corporate flagship, it’s time for revolution, but if base Corvettes rise from today’s $55,900, it could make the car prohibitively expensive for enthusiasts.

“People who aspire to own a Corvette could be slightly left out,” Caldwell continued. “It gives opportunity to Camaro, but there could also be something between Camaro and the mid-engine Corvette. The new car is definitely going to attract a different audience.”

Almost as long as there have been Corvettes, there have been mid-engine concepts percolating in the shadows. Chevrolet showed the CERV II in 1964 with a 550-horsepower V8 engine and all-wheel-drive.

The curvaceous XP-880 Astro II followed in 1968 with a 390-horsepower V8. Styling expressed clear lineage to contemporary Corvettes, but GM management rejected it too. Mid-engine cars were deemed too expensive to build, especially when front-engine Corvettes were selling well.

One of the more notable mid-engine Corvette concepts was the XP-882 that debuted at the 1970 New York Auto Show with a 400-cubic-inch V8, beefy styling, and positive crowd response. GM then pushed further with the aluminum-bodied 1972 XP-895 and compact 1973 XP-897GT that ran with a two-rotor Wankel engine. Strong sales of the third-generation C3 precluded both, but development of the C4 was underway.

That car was almost a silver gull-wing exotic that looked like a Stingray had relations with a DeLorean. It debuted in 1973 as the Four-Rotor Corvette powered by connected Wankel rotary engines, but became the Aerovette in 1976 when a traditional V8 engine was transplanted.

In an interview with the auto editors of Consumer Guide, Zora Arkus-Duntov, Corvette’s first engineering chief, reflected on this period. “In 1974, I had a conversation with the chairman of the board,” Duntov said. “He said, ‘Let’s wait. Right now, we cannot build enough cars to satisfy the demand.’ I tried to promulgate the mid-engine car. If I was not forced to retire, (the 1984 model) would probably be a mid-engine car. The mid-engine design in ’69 and ’73-’74 was in the picture on and off. I think I would have won the fight given time.”

Dreams persisted as Chevrolet rolled out its futuristic Corvette Indy concept in 1986 sporting a 2.65-liter V8 from GM’s racing program, glass canopy, carbon composite body, all-wheel-drive, four-wheel steering and hydraulic suspension. The Indy evolved into the more conservative 1990 CERV III, packing a 650-horsepower twin-turbo 32-valve V8. It was visually connected to Corvettes but was ultimately passed over for production.

Front-engine Corvettes persevered because engineers extracted ever greater performance. The 1984-1996 C4 had a “front-mid-engine” design, which placed the engine far beneath the dashboard to balance weight. The ZR-1 edition eventually boasted a 405-horsepower 32-valve V8, 0-60 mph in 4.4 seconds and 180 mph top speed. Moving transmissions to the rear in 1997-2004 C5, 2005-2013 C6, and 2014-2019 C7 generations further balanced handling with today’s ZR1, delivering 755-horsepower, 0-60 mph in 3.1 seconds and over 200 mph top speed.

Corvette’s current architecture has served well but is unable to accommodate all-wheel-drive and electrification — both crucial for ultimate performance. If Corvettes are being outrun by Teslas, they’re certainly no match for top McLarens, Porsches and Ferraris.

Noting a mid-engine C7 was green-lighted before his 2010 retirement, former GM Vice Chairman Bob Lutz told Autoline in September: “We wanted to do a mid-engine Corvette before the ’07/’08 financial meltdown. We had to cancel that investment-intensive program to do one more iteration off of the C6, which turned out to be the C7. We were at the limit of what we can achieve with the lay-out. To achieve superior lap times, the car has to go mid-engine.”

After decades of dreaming, a mid-engine Corvette is reality. The question is, how will enthusiasts respond?

“I like the design and believe it is overdue,” said Steve Riebe, president of the Chicago Corvette Club. “People seem rather excited about this, not like when the C6 and C7 were introduced. Many complained about the taillights which looked like a Camaro’s. People also complained about non-retractable headlights. All those negative feelings seemed to clear out in a short time. I have warm and fuzzy feelings this will be the best Corvette ever.”

If handling is a mid-engine car’s key advantage, then limited interior space and a higher price are its negatives. Not everybody will be pleased.

“Every design change requires time for fans to adjust,” said Jon Thorn, Corvette Club of America board member and owner of a 2007 Black Corvette Z06. “Every new generation brings out critics. ... We all want Corvette to be successful, and the C7 had pretty much run its course.”

PIONEER PRESS BASEBALL PLAYER OF THE YEAR

MICHAEL PROSECKY
NAZARETH

BY GREGG VOSS

Although getting drafted by a Major League Baseball club was among the best experiences of his life, Michael Prosecky is confident in his choice to play college baseball.

Prosecky, a left-handed Nazareth pitcher from Westchester, was selected by the Philadelphia Phillies in the 35th round of the MLB draft on June 5.

Prosecky's commitment to Louisville is the primary reason why he was not selected much earlier in the draft.

Which was more memorable for Prosecky: getting drafted as a senior, or committing to Louisville as a sophomore?

"They both are pretty memorable, because I feel they are big things that I've done in my career, the biggest things I've been able to accomplish," he said. "I'd say it's pretty equal, but capitalizing on the opportunity, it's going to school. But going to the Phillies was cool."

After a stellar senior season, Prosecky has been named the Pioneer Press Baseball Player of the Year.

"It's different (to win an award) for a pitcher, because it really is a testament to my whole team, being able to make plays behind me, scoring for me and doing everything it takes," Prosecky said. "I think it's an awesome recognition for the program and all the things we accomplished this year. Just a really cool thing."

Prosecky said he considered his options throughout his senior season at Nazareth and kept coming to the same conclusion: School would be the best thing for him. He's leaning toward a business major at

ROB DICKER/PIONEER PRESS

Nazareth pitcher Michael Prosecky, seen here pitching last season, finished his senior year with a 1.12 ERA. He was drafted by the Philadelphia Phillies but instead will play college baseball at Louisville.

Louisville, where his summer classes will begin July 1.

"The biggest thing personally was Louisville is one of the national powerhouse schools, and coach (Dan) McDonnell, what he's done the past 12 or 13 years has been unparalleled," Prosecky said. "It was great to be looked at by that kind of program, but the school looked like an environment where I could succeed."

This spring, in front of as many as 40 MLB scouts per game, he threw 49-2/3 innings, gave up 12 runs (eight earned), struck out 77 and walked 22. He throws two- and four-seam fastballs, a hard slider, a changeup, and he's working on a curveball.

But according to Roadrunners catcher Andrew McKenna, that's just part of his arsenal.

"I think what really separates him is his mentality," McKenna said. "He's always grinding and grinding. When you have the stuff he has, and you couple it with his mentality, he takes his stuff like a professional. He's a veteran."

What's his secret? It's an old-school formula: work fast and throw strikes.

"My biggest thing when I throw is not letting the hitters get comfortable," he said. "Each pitch is a competition, and I'm trying to win each pitch."

Nazareth baseball coach Lee Milano said Prosecky's ceiling is high. He has a loose arm, is effortless at the plate and is likely going to have a consistent fastball in the mid-90s.

Milano said a lot has to go right to make it to the big leagues, but Prosecky is on the right track thanks to his talent and his mindset.

"It's a journey where there are peaks and valleys," Milano said. "He has a good head on his shoulders. He's going to Louisville and he's going to get an education, and in three years we'll see where he's at."

PIONEER PRESS SOFTBALL PLAYER OF THE YEAR

KENDALL PETERSON
BARRINGTON

BY BOB NARANG

Kendall Peterson is a skilled hitter who can handle the best pitchers' best curveballs.

But some of the toughest curveballs come not from pitchers, but from life itself.

Peterson, a Barrington senior third baseman, produced one of the best individual seasons in program history. She finished with single-season records for batting average (.571), slugging (1.114), on-base percentage (.639) and batting average with runners in scoring position (.580). The Northwestern recruit added 13 home runs, 18 doubles, 53 RBIs and 57 runs and struck out only seven times all season.

Peterson, the daughter of longtime Barrington softball coach Perry Peterson, committed one fielding error all year and led the Fillies (30-5) to their 18th consecutive regional championship.

For her efforts, Kendall Peterson has been named the 2019 Pioneer Press Softball Player of the Year.

"I put in a crazy amount of work in the offseason," she said. "The preseason workouts made my season stand out. I put in significantly more work than I've ever done in my career."

As of May 9, she had a 35-game hitting streak dating to last season.

"It was crazy how well she was hitting the ball," Perry Peterson said.

But as the Fillies prepared for the ICA Greg Easter Softball Tournament, the Peterson household had a serious scare. Kendall Peterson discovered that her mother, Jennifer, had suffered a serious fall in their house. Jennifer Peterson was diagnosed with a severely broken ankle.

Kendall Peterson managed to play two games later that day, but the hitting streak came to an end. Her mind was elsewhere.

"It was a very dramatic event," Kendall said. "It was very hard to see my mom like that."

"It was hard to play because my mind was on what had happened that day instead of my performance."

Perry Peterson said his daughter's prolific heating cooled off a bit in the season's final month, but Kendall Peterson learned plenty during that stretch.

"She learned how to deal with adversity," Perry Peterson said. "She was on such an outrageous run. She was really glued in. She had to find a way to refocus and adjust to a different routine with people always in the house, helping out and bringing food."

"Life is more than softball," Kendall Peterson added. "It was definitely a turning point in my personal season, but at the end of the day, as long as my family is healthy, I'm happy."

Kendall Peterson said she was disappointed that the Fillies could not win a state title this season. Perry Peterson has won 800 games but is still chasing his first state championship.

But this season remained a memorable one for the coach and his daughter. Perry Peterson has kept records detailing every hour of every practice and game of his daughter's career.

"It's sad, the end of an era," Perry Peterson said. "That's been a huge part of our life, in our household since she was little. She wore a Barrington softball pinstriped uniform when she was 2 or 3 years old. But from a coach and parent's view, it's been a lot of fun. I'm thankful as a coach to keep going, but our house will be different."
